Growing up in Iowa and Minnesota, shucking corn was one of those chores that was always relegated to us kids. Our dad would hand us a giant bag of sweet corn fresh from the field, shoo us onto the porch, and shut the door behind us. But I never really minded. Once you get the hang of it, shucking ...

Just noticed the comment about MacOS, and while I think the solution from @akira (and pv) is much neater I thought I'd chase a hunch and a quick playaround in my MacOS box with tar and sending it a SIGINFO signal. Funnily enough, it worked :) if you're on a BSD-like system, this should work, but on a Linux box, you might need to send a SIGUSR1, and/or tar might not work the same way.

Marie Kondo believes that the things you want to use more often should be placed where you're more likely to see them. That can mean leaving a blender on the counter if you're trying to get in the habit of making smoothies or keeping your water filter in plain sight to drink more water. In terms of your spice drawer, it also works for practicality's sake; the spices you use more often ...
