

The Anthrobscene

The Anthrobscene

The question of “What even is the Anthropocene?” is oddly open and self-deferring, which is even further complicated yet significantly expanded by a cultural tendency to neologize around the -cene: Capitalocene, Plantationocene, Chtuhlucene (Haraway), Anthrobscene (Parikka), Mediocene (Engell and Siegert), Black Anthropocene(s) (Yusoff), just to mention a few.

Gender Forum - An Internet Journal for Gender Studies

As part of our final activities, the many headed monster that was our group (taking our modus operandi from our non-human collaborators, the slime molds introduced by Heather Barnett), co-composed a writing for the Field_Notes field report, which you can read here. In our texts we continued working with multiple voices and forces in a effort to convey the myriad modes of engagement of our ...
